Governance Resilience and Recovery - Syria

Strengthening Leadership for Syria's Future

The DPP Syria – Governance, Resilience and Recovery (DPP–GRR) is a specialised executive education programme designed for Syrian professionals based in Syria working on governance, resilience, development, institutional reform and recovery. Combining regional learning in Syria, workplace-based applied research and leadership training in Geneva, the programme aims to strengthen the capacities of a new generation of Syrian professionals contributing to inclusive and sustainable recovery processes in post-conflict settings.

Objectives

The Governance Resilience and Recovery programme will enable you to:

- Strengthen leadership, governance and institutional reform capacities in fragile and conflict-affected contexts
- Support inclusive, conflict-sensitive and gender-responsive recovery approaches
- Develop practical and policy-oriented skills through applied research and workplace-based learning
- Promote social cohesion, accountability and citizen-centred governance
- Support local economic recovery, entrepreneurship and sustainable development initiatives
- Strengthen cooperation and dialogue between public institutions, civil society, academia and the private sector
- Foster a long-term Community of Practice connecting Syrian professionals and institutions working on recovery and resilience

PROGRAMME HIGHLIGHTS

Module 1

Syria regional hub

Participants begin with an online introductory component developed in collaboration with Damascus University, followed by an intensive in-person module delivered in Damascus at the Syrian Diplomatic Institute.

The module focuses on governance, development, institutional recovery, resilience, social cohesion, human security and inclusive service delivery in post-conflict and complex contexts. It also strengthens participants' transversal and methodological skills, including critical thinking, analytical capacity, strategic decision-making and problem-solving in complex environments.

Module 2

Workplace-based Learning

Participants return to their professional environments to develop a practice-based professional thesis linked to a concrete governance, resilience or recovery challenge within their institution or community. They receive continuous mentoring, academic supervision and access to specialised online thematic courses.

Module 3

Geneva

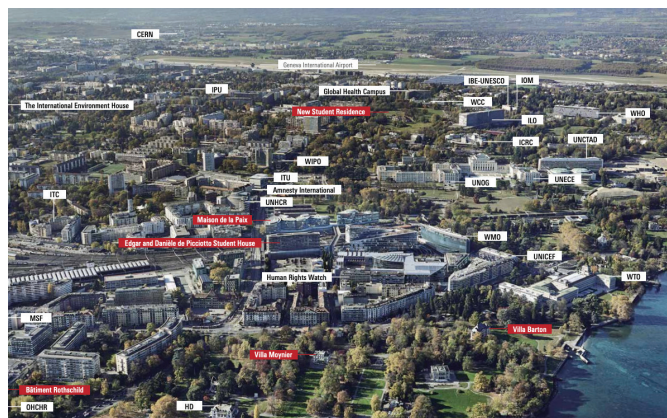

The final module takes place in Geneva and focuses on leadership, negotiation, strategic management and international policy engagement. Participants present and defend their professional papers while interacting with international organisations, Swiss institutions and Geneva-based policy actors.
